

Announcement of Selection of President/Executive Director of Community Colleges for International Development, Inc. (CCID)

On behalf of the CCID Board of Directors it is my pleasure to announce that CCID has completed its national search for its CEO and that Dr. Carol Stax Brown has accepted the position. Her appointment as president will be effective April 15, 2011. Dr. Stax Brown has led the very successful Community College Initiative as its National Director for CCID since 2008. Earlier in her career she became the campus administrator opening a new college and managing accreditation processes for its technical and industrial programs. Dr. Stax Brown also has several years of corporate experience in marketing and public relations, with particular success in start-up company ventures.

Dr. Stax Brown received her B.A. from James Madison University and M.A.T. from Quinnipiac University. Recently, Dr. Stax Brown earned her Ed.D. in Workforce Education from the University of Georgia through the Community and Technical College Leadership Program. Her research focus examined “Global Virtual Communities of Practice.” She continues to support efforts to promote the community college model in developing nations. Additionally, Dr. Stax Brown is a graduate of the Georgia Academy for Economic Development and the League for Innovation of Community Colleges’ Executive Leadership Institute.

Please join me in welcoming Dr. Carol Stax Brown to her new role as President of CCID.

Jack Bermingham, Ph.D.
CCID Board Chair, 2010-11
